OMG! I am having an amazing time in New York. I have visited beautiful lakes and gorgeous mountains. We then went to the south and rode on the subway which cuts right under the city! We went to Ellis Island today and learned all about how New York has such a diverse population because about twenty five million immigrants entered the United States from here. Wish you were here!

After driving all night we have finally arrived in Atlanta (the GPS says we are at  $(33.7489^{\circ} N, 84.3900^{\circ} W)$ ). It is hot here. so hot some people call it Hotlanta! Being from the north I find it so interesting that almost everyone here speaks with a southern accent. It is so much different from New England! Can't wait to see you again!

Hello there! I am writing to you from fabulous Los Angeles, California. There are sooooo many people here. I did some research and found out it's the second most populated city in the United States. So many of these people aren't originally from California; they traveled from all over the world to come here to try to be successful in the entertainment industry. Los Angeles lies south of San Francisco. Cool, huh? I can't wait to go to the beach.

We are having an amazing time taking our road trip through New England. Although there are six different states, they are all connected by a similar historical background. Most of New England was founded by British colonists. Since it is January and really cold here, people tend to wear a lot of layers and even their roofs are slanted so the snow falls off. The region of New England is located east of New York state. While we're here, I think I'm going to go skiing!
